I have been a US citizen all of my life, as well as an ecological minded patron of the outdoors. I believe we have or will have problems with abundant clean water to drink and enjoy, but I have seen what the way the Forest Service is managing my/our national forests sense I moved to the Pacific North West in 1989. And in my observations this problem is rooted in "greed" not in the American people enjoying the outdoors. Closing off the "Road-Less" areas of our national forests from U S (or we the people) is not going to solve any long term water purity problems we may have but proper management will. And further more I do not trust the intentions or motives of our President at this time. In GOD We Trust and will contenue.

Yours Truley,
E. Brian Moran
